The leadership seminar: Modern leadership in practice

Leadership today - practical seminar for experienced managers

Leadership training for leaders and top performers who want to increase their influence and make a greater impact as a personality.

In a competitive business environment, people are increasingly making the difference. Change, skills shortages, employee expectations, virtual working, automation, pressure, complexity, disruption and confusion - in order to cope with the diverse demands within an organisation, you need leadership that is at the cutting edge.

How do you get people moving? How do you exert influence without exerting pressure? How do you get employees to want what they should? These questions determine success or failure in leadership, in project management, but also in collegial cooperation.

Fortunately, in the modern corporate world, orders and obedience are a thing of the past. Instructions are taboo. Not only do they contradict the spirit of the times, they also contradict the factual logic of today's work, as they do not fit in with complex tasks, virtual work environments, constant change and global collaboration.

But what will replace instructions? When the crowbar is no longer available, managers need finer tools.

Expand your leadership skills and take your management style to the next level.

Instructor

Dr. Bernhard Sterchi

He sees himself as a thought sorter and possibility space maintainer. He supports managers and organisations to improve their effectiveness in complex and dynamic contexts. As a trainer, consultant and coach for over 16 years, he has accompanied significant transformations of personal and institutional maturity in family businesses, corporations and public offices, from middle managers to CEOs and owners. Building on systems science approaches to management, he now focuses on the application of complexity science in leadership contexts.
